

Feelings Chart

happy

Blank space for writing about the feeling of happiness.

Blank space for writing about the feeling of sadness.

sad

surprised

Blank space for writing about the feeling of surprise.

Blank space for writing about the feeling of anger.

angry

Excited

Blank space for writing about the feeling of excitement.

Blank space for writing about the feeling of fear.

scared

Draw a picture or write about what made you happy – read this next time you feel sad.

twinkl.com

Talk to someone about how you are feeling.

twinkl.com

Look in the mirror at your face and describe what makes you look happy.

twinkl.com

Look in the mirror and describe what makes you look surprised.

twinkl.com

Talk to someone about why you are surprised.

twinkl.com

Tell someone why you are excited.

twinkl.com

Draw a picture to show what you are excited about.

twinkl.com

Try to describe how you are feeling and how your body feels.

twinkl.com

Talk to someone about what is making you sad then try to come up with a way of feeling better.

twinkl.com

Think about something that makes you happy.

twinkl.com

Go for a walk and try to focus on what you can see rather than what your mind is thinking.

twinkl.com

Say three things that have gone well for you today.

twinkl.com

Take a brain break from what you are doing to do something you enjoy.

twinkl.com

Focus on your breathing; take 10 long, deep breaths and focus on nothing but your breathing for this time.

twinkl.com

Squeeze a stress ball or screw up a piece of paper.

twinkl.com

Go into a quiet space away from what is making you angry.

twinkl.com

Explain to someone exactly what it is that is making you scared.

twinkl.com

Move away from what is making you scared.

twinkl.com

Do something you enjoy to take your mind off it.

twinkl.com